NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

The Convention [illegible] Democracy [illegible]

Chairman Jones [illegible] the [illegible] Makes a Lengthy Address.

Nominations Made and the Declaration of Principles Adopted.

The Mention of Cleveland's Name Calls Forth Great Applause.

New York Democratic Convention

SYRACUSE, October 1.—[illegible] convention hall was crowded when at noon Edward Murphy, chairman of the state committee, called the convention to order and announced [illegible] of the state committee [illegible] Edward O. Jones temporary [illegible]. The committee's action was [illegible] adopted and a committee was appointed to escort Jones to the chair. [illegible] It he spoke at considerable length. He was frequently applauded. His allusion to Cleveland evoked hearty cheering which continued for over a minute. At that point in his speech when he referred to Governor Hill and used the phrase, "I am a democrat" there was also wild cheering. He referred to the last national campaign and declared that the party had not lost faith in either its principles or its leaders. He eulogized ex-president Cleveland and on the subject of pensions for veterans said: "When their interests were in our hands not only were their rights carefully regarded, but the honor of the veterans was protected. To-day he who risked his life by leading a forlorn hope and who was carried from the battle field after the conflict was ended, maimed for life, finds himself with his rightful claims on the gratitude of his country rated no higher than the bounty jumper and the deserter and now he confesses with shame that he helped by his vote to place in power an administration that would only brand him and every comrade who holds an honorable discharge with the lowest stigma of disgrace. In the political campaign of 1888 the soldier was promised pensions galore. Influenced by their prejudice, tempted by their greed they rallied to the republican standard by regiments. When the administration assumed power their confidence was renewed. They felt encouraged by the appointment of one from their own ranks to the office of commissioner of pensions, who upon assuming office assured his old comrades that the liberal promises he had made [illegible] on the stump should be faithfully kept. He took his position with the honest intention of carrying out what he had been taught in the campaign to be the policy of the republican administration if elected. But he soon found that it was intended as their policy if not elected. He was a faithful soldier who thought he was obeying orders but his superior officers when he opened the flood gates of the treasury found it convenient to remove him."

When Jones concluded the convention took a recess and on reassembling the temporary organization was made permanent and a platform adopted. It reaffirms the doctrines of the national democratic platform of 1888 and says "We do not advocate free trade, but steadfastly advocate the principal of tariff reform." President Cleveland's administration is endorsed. The republican party is charged with obtaining power by corruption, false pretences, intimidation of voters, unperformed promises and shameless trafficking of cabinet and other offices to the highest bidders. President Harrison is arraigned for having removed hundreds of honest and capable officers before the expiration of their terms, in violation of his anti-election pledges. The plank dealing with the liquor questions says: "We do not favor the unrestricted sale of intoxicating liquor, but we believe the liquor traffic should be restrained and regulated by just and equitable laws rigidly enforced, which should be uniform throughout the state." Republicans of New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania are denounced for submitting or proposing to submit prohibition amendments only to defeat them at the polls. Electoral reform receives renewed pledges of support, but not as embodied in the Saxton bill, which was the republican measure last winter. The administration of Governor Hill is endorsed.

Ex-assemblyman, Frank Rice, of Ontario county, was nominated for secretary of state. Edward Wemple was renominated for comptroller; Hon. Elliott Danforth for treasurer, Charles F. Tabor was renominated for attorney general, John Bogart for state engineer and surveyor, and Dennis O'Brien for court of appeals judge. Adjourned sine die.

Maryland Republicans

WESTMINSTER, MD., October 1.—This is an off year and as the state controller is the only officer to be elected there is not quite the usual interest manifested in the republican state convention. The convention was called to order shortly after noon. Dr. Jacob M. Weaver, jr., was the temporary chairman. After the appointment of the usual committees the convention took a recess until 2 p. m.

Geo. L. Wellington was nominated for state comptroller.

Presidential Appointments

WASHINGTON, October 1.—The president made the following appointments to-day:

Discontinuing Cabinet Meetings

WASHINGTON, October 1.—The president [illegible] the cabinet this morning that there would be no meeting to-day [illegible] expect them to meet as usual on Friday afternoon. Private Secretary Halford said to-day that the [illegible] was omitted because the president saw no necessity for holding it.

The Flack Conspirators Held.

NEW YORK, October 1.—In the Court of General Sessions this morning, before Judge Gildersleeve, Sheriff Flack, Jos. W. Meeks and Judge Ambrose Morrell were held in $5,000 bail each and Will Flack and Geo. W. Hart in $2,000 bail each to plead to the indictments charging them with conspiracy and perjury on Wednesday.

Fowle's Objections.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—Secretary Proctor has received a letter from Governor Fowle, of North Carolina, objecting in very decisive terms to the transfer of Chief Geronimo and his band of Apaches to a tract of land in North Carolina. The secretary said this morning: "Governor Fowle I am informed will reach Washington to-day and will talk over the matter personally." The secretary also intimated that the department would probably take immediate steps toward the transfer of the party because of the danger to the Indians' health from a change of climate in winter.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., October 1.—A large part and the best part of the residence portion of this city was wiped out by fire this morning. Among the buildings burned are: The Cutler house, one of the best hotels in Michigan; the residence of Dwight Cutler, a beautiful place filled with exquisite furniture, valuable pictures, works of art, etc.; the residences of Mrs. Slaytor, T. A. Parris, Geo. D. Sanford, Captain McCullom, A. S. Kedzie; three churches, the First Reformed, Unitarian and Methodist, and besides these about thirty other buildings. The loss is half a million dollars.

Whereabouts of the Bear.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—The whereabouts of the revenue steamer Bear have been made known to the navy department by Lieutenant Commander Stockton, of the Thetis. The Bear was at Point Barrow on July 29th when the Thetis arrived there and was still in port on August 8th when the latter vessel left for a short cruise to the eastward where a whaling fleet is cruising. The site for the Point Barrow refuge station has been selected by Captain Healy and the house was well under way when the Thetis was there. Whalers have lent much assistance.

Quarrel Over a Boat.

LONDON, October 1.—Trouble between Captain W. Lawler and Mr. Black over the ownership of the boat "Neversink" in which Lawler crossed the Atlantic, has culminated in bloodshed. The boat was seized by Black at Cherbourg, France, and taken to Cowes, Isle of Wight, whither Lawler proceeded and took possession of her. He brought her to Portsmouth. At Portsmouth he was accused of stealing the boat and to-day the harbor master and his assistant attempted to seize the "Neversink" when Lawler drew his pistol and shot both. Lawler then left the boat in charge of the harbor people.

Later Captain Lawler, on the advice of the American consular agent at Portsmouth to retake the boat with the least force necessary, armed himself with two crowbars and a revolver. He proceeded to the Neversink and climbed over the side of the vessel. With a crowbar he felled the first of the crew who came toward him. He then opened fire with his revolver and a bullet struck a sailor in the leg. The sailors, however, overpowered Lawler and he was taken ashore in a police boat. A large number of persons gathered at the landing place and upon the arrival of Captain Lawler made an attempt to lynch him. The crowd was driven back by the police and the prisoner was lodged in jail. He was subsequently arraigned and remanded on the charge of attempted murder.

Commodore Walker Relieved

WASHINGTON, October 1.—Secretary Tracy has relieved Commodore Walker from duty as chief of the bureau of navigation of the navy department. The text of the order is as follows.

SIR—You will proceed to the navy yard at New York, confer with the commandant and hoist your flag on board the Chicago as acting rear admiral and commander in chief of the squadron there. You will prepare the squadron for sea with all proper dispatch and when in all respects ready you will sail for Europe and assume command of the European station until further orders. The squadron will for the present consist of the Chicago, Atlanta, Boston and Yorktown, to which the Enterprise will be added upon your arrival within the limits of the European station. When you have hoisted your flag you will return to Washington and temporarily resume your present duties in the navy department.

[Signed] BENJAMIN TRACY,
Secretary of the Navy.

The secretary says that the relief of Commodore Walker grew out of no personal [illegible] difference between himself and the commodore. The officer has [illegible] years at the head of the navigation [illegible] and his time would soon expire. To reappoint him for another term would mean a continuous service [illegible] in the department for twelve years. This precedent is one which the secretary does not care to establish. The vessels which will be under Commodore Walker's command are the pick of the navy and in fact with the exception of the Charleston and Baltimore, which have not yet been accepted, represent all of the navy.

ENTERING THE UNION.

The First Elections in the Four New States of the Union.

At the Polls in the Two Dakotas, Washington and Montana.

Republican Victories Claimed in Three of the New States.

Indications that the Democrats have Carried Montana.

Elections in the New States

ST. PAUL, October 1.—In the clear crispness of an October day the citizens of North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington to-day cast their first votes for state officers and congressmen. A full vote was assured when the sun set last night on the closing of as interesting a campaign as any state ever had, and reports thus far received indicate the interest of the people in the birth of the new states. Although there have been charges and counter charges of frauds preliminary to the election all the reports thus far received are to the effect that matters[illegible] is being quietly accomplished. A close fight for offices in Montana and a bitter capital fight in South Dakota developed most of this talk of fraud, but it has not yet materialized at the polls.

As yet there seems to be no reason to change the predictions made here to fore in these dispatches that the republicans will carry North and South Dakota, and have apparently the advantage in Washington, while Montana seems inclined somewhat favorably to the democrats. Further than this it will not be possible to make certain statements as to the result [illegible] the votes have been counted. Changes in the district lines, the arrival of citizens since the last territorial election and the consequent lack of data on which to base predictions, make the prophet business a losing one. Still the last vote for delegate and the canvass by the two parties indicate the result above stated. Washington's capital fight will be probably not settled until a later election, a majority vote being required, but each of South Dakota's capital competitors are confident of winning.

HURON, S. D., October 1.—On this perfect autumn day the voting is progressing quietly. Half a thousand votes had been cast in this city at noon. Passengers arriving on the [illegible] trains state that a large vote is being cast in every county. Huron's vote for the capital is as large as could be expected. Huron and Beadle county will give a majority for prohibition.

MITCHELL, S. D., October 1.—The capital fight is very close between the five towns which are candidates, and all reports of the withdrawal of any of the candidates are false and made for a purpose.

HELENA, Mont., October 1.—Since last night the feeling throughout Montana was that the democrats would carry the state and bulletins from all important points after 12 o'clock to-day confirmed this feeling, and at 6 p. m. when the polls closed, the democratic managers claimed the state. While not venturing on figures in this city, it is known that republicans scratched the ticket badly, while the democrats voted the straight ticket, and the same reports come from all over the territory save in Chateau county, where it is thought Toole, the democrat, will run behind Power, the republican. The election was conducted under the Australian law and to the surprise of every one the votes were polled rapidly, nearly all the voting being done by noon. Reports from all sections of the territory indicate that there was no disorder of any kind. Scarcely a man was seen under the influence of liquor, and there were no attempts at illegal voting. The Australian balloting system proved so far as heard from a complete success. The ticket is a long one and it will be late before sufficient returns are in to know the result on governor and congressmen.

BISMARCK, Dak., October 1.—The official count for the city shows an average majority for the republican ticket of 163. Private telegrams from twenty five legislative districts show the election of sixty-seven members of the legislature favorable to Gilbert A. Pierce for the United States senate. Four more are known to be for Pierce in safe republican counties, giving him seventy one votes sure out of a total of ninety two in both houses. Eleven county precincts and the city of Bismarck gave a majority of 449 against prohibition. The constitution is carried almost solidly.

ST. PAUL, Minn., October 1.—Late returns received by the Pioneer Press indicate the adoption of the prohibition proposition in South Dakota and the defeat of the clause for minority representation. From North Dakota the returns indicate the election of fourteen republicans and two democrats to the legislature. The other districts are not yet heard from.

The Pioneer Press special from Tacoma, Washington territory, says the complexion of the legislature must remain in doubt until the vote is fully counted. The Pioneer Press special from Bismarck, North Dakota, says: "At 11 o'clock few returns from the state at large have been received. The republican legislative ticket in this county has been elected by majorities ranging from 100 to 150. In Morton county the republican legislative ticket was elected and in Stark county, where there was a sharp fight, the republican legislative ticket was also elected."

In the Kidder and Emmons districts the same is true, thirteen republican candidates for the legislature in the Bismarck land district being elected. Prohibition is defeated in Burleigh county by four hundred majority and in the counties of the Missouri slope by 1500 majority. The only lawyer candidate for the state senate, J. S. Frye, republican of Jamestown, seems to be defeated by his strong independent opponent. Fuller Lamour county elected republican candidates to the legislature.

HELENA, Mont., October 1.—Returns up to [illegible] show a complete change in Montana from the last congressional election. The counties of Deer Lodge and Silver Bow, in which the towns of Anaconda and Butte are situated, and which gave last year a republican majority of 2500, have gone democratic this year. The democrats claim the entire state ticket and a majority of the legislature.

The Journal (republican) claims the gubernatorial seat for Carter by 2500 and says that Power for congress will not run 500 behind. It says that the legislature cannot be forecast, but is confident of a re-

[illegible], October 1.—[illegible] [illegible] Prohibition is carrying well and has certainly been carried by a [illegible] majority. Indications point toward Sioux Falls as the selection for the capital. Reports from different [illegible] say that the republicans have the legislature by a majority of [illegible]

ST. PAUL, Minn., October 1.—At midnight the returns to the Globe (democratic) indicate that Washington has elected a republican governor and congressman by [illegible] and a republican legislature by a good majority. Montana is close, with the probabilities in favor of the democrats who seem to have elected the governor and carried the legislature while the congressman is in doubt, with Carter, republican, running ahead of his ticket. In North Dakota the democrats get three judges and twenty three members of the legislature. The vote on prohibition is close. In South Dakota the republicans get a clean sweep.

Arapahoe Republicans

DENVER, October 1.—The republican county convention convened in Music hall this morning. Hon. John L. Routt was elected chairman. There were two factions in the convention, one termed "the Gang" and the other the "anti-Gang," and the two wings of the convention consumed the entire day in wrangling over the appointment of various committees and endeavoring to patch up some kind of a compromise.

At the night session Walter Conway was nominated for sheriff on the first ballot. Joe Smith was nominated for county clerk and recorder and D. B. Hart for county treasurer, when adjournment was taken until to-morrow. These nominations indicate a compromise effected at the evening recess, as Conway is understood to be anti-gang and Smith the gang candidate.

The Navassa Riot.

BALTIMORE, October 1.—The first authentic information about the riots on Navassa Island were received last night in a letter from Dr. Smith, acting superintendent of the Navassa Phosphate company, who, with C. W. Roby, a mine boss, and one other official, are the only surviving officers of the bloody affray. They have taken refuge on the British man-of-war, Forward, which came to their assistance.

Dr. Smith writes that on the morning of the 14th of September the negroes arose in insurrection and killed four officers, Thomas N. Foster, Joseph Fales, James Mahon and Wm. T. Shea. Roby was the first assailed in the diggings and was left for dead. At noon the men congregated in front of the superintendent's house and refused to work. When Smith attempted to arrest one of the ring leaders he was knocked down and in a few minutes a howling mob surrounded him. He managed to get to his house whither other officers sought shelter from the volley of rocks and other missiles hurled at them. From the superintendent's house fire was opened on the mob. The battle lasted three hours with an occasional negro wounded, when the inmates were startled by an explosion of a dynamite bomb on the lower porch. This was soon followed by another and there was a continual roar of dynamite. Then the officials attempted to seek another shelter but were surrounded and Foster was butchered with knives and Joseph Fales chopped to pieces with axes. William Shea and James Mahon were also murdered. All the murdered men are Baltimoreans. The negroes still have possession of the island.

A Denver Sport in Trouble

CHICAGO, October 1.—William Collins, the Denver sport who was bound over by the grand jury to-day on the charge of highway robbery, spent to-night in jail, but his attorneys will try to get him out to-morrow on a writ of habeas corpus. They applied to Judge Horton for a writ, alleging in their petition that the evidence on which he was held was insufficient. A writ was issued returnable to-morrow morning. The attorney asked that it be issued without costs on the ground that Collins had no funds, but Judge Horton, who had heard of the $5,000 certificate of deposit which Collins took from Jeff Hankins, or else of his flashing diamonds peremptorily overruled that part of the petition.

Boulanger's Reduced Finances

LONDON, October 1.—It is reported that Boulanger will take up his residence in the Isle of Jersey. It is said this is due to his desire to reduce expenses as the persons who have been furnishing him financial support refuse to continue to supply him with money. He has had a quarrel with Rochefort. Rochefort will visit Egypt and pass the winter there unless granted amnesty by the French government.

Yellow Fever on Board

NEW YORK, October 1.—The bark Jane [illegible] eight days over due from Havana [illegible] arrived. There were reports that yellow fever had been raging on the vessel and that all hands had been [illegible] [illegible] exaggerated. One of the sailors, L. Spari, was sick for [illegible] seven days when he disappeared. He is supposed to have jumped over board. Two other sailors were stricken down by the fever but have recovered.

Pulitzer never misses his opportunity to get in a judicious amount of advertising. He did not catch on very early to the world's fair boom in New York city. This seemed to be monopolized by his [illegible], Charles A. Dana. Though Mr. Dana was ahead of him and is chairman of one of the important committees, Mr. Pulitzer has put himself in a position to scold more than Mr. Dana, for Dana subscribed ten thousand dollars, while Pulitzer subscribed one hundred thousand.

Fred Grant [illegible] to favor the removal of the remains of his father to Washington. It is not to be wondered at. General Grant's selection of New York as his final burying place was [illegible] by the entire [illegible]. New York city, however, seemed pleased with it, but has shown so little appreciation that she has failed to raise the money necessary to build a proper monument over his remains. This is the work that the nation should now do, but the memorial should be raised in a place that is truly national. There are only two places worthy of thought, West Point, so that his memory may be kept more alive in the minds of the young soldiers who will graduate there, and Washington, the most appropriate place for any national memorial. The latter place must be for all time the true centre of our national life.

It is said that ex-President Strong, of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe has been offered and has accepted the presidency of the Missouri Pacific. If this is true, it looks as if Jay Gould intended to do a little railroad wrecking. Perhaps no railroad man in this country, with the exception of the president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, had so good an opportunity as President Strong of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. He was elected president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe early in the winter of 187[illegible]-8. This was at the time when the railroad development of the west received its first impetus after the dark days of 1873. He was elected president of the line having the easiest grade between the Missouri river and the Rocky mountains. It was also better situated than any other line. It was in the valley of the Arkansas, to which naturally all the business of fertile and rich southern Kansas turned. This road practically had the complete monopoly of this business, for neither the Atlantic Pacific, the Missouri Pacific or any of the great lines had entered this territory. His road had a backing of a large and rich land grant as well as the backing of a large number of rich and confiding capitalists who at a moment's notice could subscribe five or six millions of dollars for an extension. A conservative, wise policy would have put the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe among the first roads of this country as a dividend paying road. But Mr. Strong was too ambitious. At the very outset he made an extension to Guaymas which has been a continual drag on the road. But even this did not prevent the Atchison from being a reliable six per cent stock. He next made a great mistake in the building of the Mexican Central, which from its position, necessarily, can never be the through line from the east to the City of Mexico. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe would have been in a much better position never to have built a line to the City of Mexico than to have built this one. During the great extension period, beginning with 188[illegible] and ending last year, he grew wilder than ever. His line from Kansas City to Chicago was an extravagant line which was not needed and never should have been built. Had he bought the Alton it would have been [illegible]. The building of the new line not only required a large outlay of capital but lessened his business from Kansas City west. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, before the building of this line, was getting more or less business from all the lines running between Chicago and Kansas City. It now has to fight the [illegible] and all the business carried [illegible] to other roads. His purchases in Texas were not only unwise but extravagantly high and have been a burden to the main line ever since. But most unwise of all, was his extension from Pueblo to Denver. The [illegible] of business between the Denver & Rio Grande and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, even as early as 188[illegible], amounted to three and a half millions of dollars. At present all the business controlled by the Denver & Rio Grande which after all is a large share of the local business of southwestern Colorado, is now given to another line, so that the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe is doing less Colorado business with its connection with Denver than it was doing without it. No railroad man in this country has had a greater opportunity than President Strong or made a poorer use of it.

Deep Harbor Convention

TOPEKA, Kan., October 1.—The deep harbor convention assembled to-day. Chairman Evans presented the report of the permanent committee and explained the purpose of the convention, which was to urge upon congress the advisability of making an appropriation sufficient to construct a deep water harbor on the coast of Texas. Committees were appointed and the convention adjourned until to-morrow.

Buried Alive.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., October 1.—While at work in a sewer trench this morning several laborers were buried by a cave-in. Christian Schunting was taken out dead and Jacob, his brother, is dying. Anton Cine and Archie Taylor are injured internally. It is thought that another man is yet beneath the debris.

Farm [illegible] Indignant

DUBLIN, October 1.—The farm laborers of County Clare are indignant at the farmers, who, they claim are using the National League for their own profit, while they oppose in every way the interests of the laborers. A meeting has been held by the laborers at which they resolved to form a laborers' league and demand the power to elect representatives to the local boards.

Eight Persons Drowned.

PORT ROWAN, October 1.—The schooner Erie Wave, commanded by Captain Stafford, capsized last evening between here and Clear Creek and eight persons were drowned. The vessel had been aground for some days and had an extra crew aboard to assist in getting her off.

Powderly in St. Louis.

Fleas in Paris.

Paris [illegible].

One of the remarkable features of the exhibition year in Paris has been the scourge of fleas, which has taken uncompromising [illegible] of all strangers arriving from parts of the world where fleas are not so [illegible]. No Parisian can ever be gotten to admit that the fleas are born here. They may come from Puy-de-Dome, from Boissy-les-Vaches or be brought here by the Arabs and Algerians at the exposition; but the fact that public vehicles and hotels swarm with them, is inconceivable to him. In the United States "the wicked flea when no man pursueth" sticketh unto the yellow dog and vagrant cat, but in Paris his fleaship disdains any kind of game but a writhing human victim.

The flea of 1889 is as agile as a chamois, and as he skips gleefully from one square inch of cuticle territory to the next the flesh rises behind him in tall welts as big as 50 centime pieces. These wounds do not heal with time, but are red and angry for at least a week, and one small but active flea can produce them at the rate of one a minute. Paris may officially deny the existence of fleas within her walls, but a chorus of American sufferers at the exhibition and elsewhere will readily attest.

A Nail in a Man's Brain.

Bridgeport News.

Probably one of the most wonderful discoveries made by the medical fraternity of this city or any other place was that revealed yesterday afternoon at the autopsy on the body of John Stewart, who died at the hospital yesterday morning about 6 o'clock. Stewart, it will be remembered, was arrested on May 17, on charges of assault on his wife and breach of the peace. The complaint was made by his son George. The latter at that time gave his father such an unmerciful beating that his face was not recognizable. The heartless son, after he got his father down, kicked him in the face until the blood flowed in streams from the wounds inflicted, and left him in an almost insensible state, in which condition he was afterward found by the police. The row occurred at Stewart's home, 96 Buckingham avenue. His son then had him arrested and sent to jail. Stewart was locked up only a few days when he began to show signs of being out of his head. It was first thought that he had the delirium tremens. He tried several times to knock his brains out by hammering his head against the walls of his cell and the bars on the door. He finally became so bad that it was found necessary to remove him to the hospital, which was accordingly done June 4. His skull was thought to be fractured, and the surgical operation of trepanning was performed. Stewart afterwards seemed to be improving and got so he was able to be about. Several weeks ago he began to grow worse again, and all hope of his recovery was given up by the hospital corps. They knew that he had but a short time to live. Sunday they performed another operation on Stewart's head but without success. The unfortunate man rapidly sank until death relieved him. He was out of his mind the greater part of the time. The hospital physicians were unable to account for the true cause of his death, and yesterday afternoon held an autopsy on the body. The result was that they discovered a 2 inch wire nail driven through the skull and piercing the brain. How it came there will probably always remain a mystery.

CURTIS ON REFORM.

Annual Meeting of the Civil [illegible] Reform League

The Able and Eloquent [illegible] President [illegible]

Removals and App[illegible] Harrison Regime

The Administration [illegible] Breaking its [illegible]

[illegible] Pursuant [illegible] annual meeting [illegible] National Civil Service Reform League [illegible] William [illegible] this afternoon [illegible] routine business [illegible] to an informal [illegible] the local association [illegible] George William Curtis presided. This evening President Curtis delivered his annual address at Association hall. There was a large audience present. Mr. Curtis spoke as follows:

Since our last annual meeting the second party change in the administration of the national government has occurred. Seven months of the new administration have passed, and as friends of civil service reform our questions to-day are obvious and simple. What was the declaration of the successful party upon the subject of reform? What were the pledges of its candidates? How have those pledges been fulfilled, and what are the prospects of reform? Four years ago in speaking of President Cleveland, then recently elected and inaugurated, I said that he "was not committed to the prosecution of reform as the candidate of a party which seriously desired it or promised it." Certainly I cannot say this of President Harrison. The promises of the successful party last year were as ardent as as they were detailed and absolute. They left nothing unexpressed. The pure purpose of reform was depicted in the platform with a touch as glowing as that of the poet in his epitaph upon a highly respectable lady—

> "Yes, Venus, [illegible], Diana and the Graces, > Compared with her should all have lost their places."

The irrepressible platform pledged the party to many things, but to nothing with such reduplicated and reiterated zeal as to reform in the civil service; and having done this in the most precise and positive words, it pledged the party with [illegible] to keep its pledges. Indeed such was the frenzy of fidelity that less excited friends of the good cause were fain to say,

> "[illegible] a fine cloud before it fall, and in it
> Catch, ere she change, the [illegible] of this minute."

To the ardor of the platform the protestations of the president, as a candidate, duly and fully responded. He declared that it would be his sincere purpose if elected to advance reform. He said that fitness and not party service should be the essential test in appointment, that fidelity and efficiency should be the only sure tenure of office, and that only the interest of the public service should suggest removals from office. The significance of these words is unmistakable. Naturally and fairly interpreted they forecast an executive action absolutely incompatible with the practice known as the spoils system. The country had precisely the same assurance from the successful party of a policy of honest reform in the civil service that it had of an administration favorable to the policy of protection, and, that no doubt might arise from political differences between the executive and the legislative branches of the government, the result of the election showed that the executive and the legislature would be in entire political accord.

* * * * * * *

President Harrison thus entered upon his administration as the choice of a party which expressly claims the honor of beginning reform in the civil service, and has vehemently promised to complete it. Not content with requiring that the existing law should be extended to all grades of the service to which it is applicable, the party went entirely beyond these grades and affirmed that "the spirit and purpose of the reform should be observed in all executive appointments." This, however, was not a pledge to any extraordinary action. It was merely a declaration that if the party were successful at the polls the administration would do its plain constitutional duty. For such it is. Whether the convention had said anything upon the question or had remained silent, the executive duty would have been the same. For the executive is morally bound as Mr. Bonaparte, president of the reform association of Maryland, said in his admirable annual address last May, to discharge all his duties upon acknowledged principles of equity and regard for the public interest and economy.

* * * * * * *

How, then, have the pledges of the successful party and candidate been fulfilled? Have fidelity and efficiency proved to be sure tenure of office? Has fitness and not party service been the essential test in determining appointments? Has the interest of the public service alone dictated removals from office? Has the great pledge of the platform that the spirit and purpose of reform should be observed in all executive appointments been honorably fulfilled? Or have such appointments generally been made precisely as they would have been made had there been no platform promises, no pledges of the candidate and no public interest in civil service reform?

It is not an answer to these questions, it is only an evasion of them, to say that reform is not favored by a majority of the people. The only way in which the views of a majority of the people can be known is by the result of an election. If the election of last year showed that the [illegible]try was in favor of protection it showed by precisely the same demonstration, that it is in favor of civil service reform. If there be any relation between party platforms and the pledges of candidates and the results of an election the country in electing Mr. Harrison declared for civil service reform. For if an election cannot be held to be a popular approval of the platform and the personal pledges of candidates who shall decide how much of them and in what sense and degree any of them have been approved? In any event whatever doubt may rest upon the views of the majority of the people in regard to reform there can be no doubt of the views and purposes and pledges of the citizen. There may be a [illegible] question of the ex[illegible] [illegible] others. But if the simplest statement which the English language permits is the plainest engagement to pursue a certain course of conduct; if the most solemn pledges uttered before God and the country have any meaning there is no doubt whatever of the opinions and intentions upon this subject of the president of the United States.

* * * * * * *

Our question, however, is not whether one president violates pledges more or less frequently than another. Still less is it a question of the comparative sagacity of the friends of reform in their party action. We meet not to explain or [illegible] not to defend or [illegible] but as friends [illegible] of party sym[illegible] [illegible] If the democratic party [illegible] representative and recognized [illegible] of the press [illegible] was a just statement of the [illegible] interest and purpose of the [illegible] best friend of [illegible] confess may [illegible] political action [illegible] heartily the [illegible]

[illegible] answer. What is [illegible] party [illegible] the conduct of [illegible] The answer of course is [illegible] detail and can be only general [illegible] Let us look at the [illegible] party feeling.

A few weeks ago [illegible] a party organ at the capital of New York, one of the most efficient and representative party journals, exclaimed: "Fifteen thousand fourth class postmasters have been removed to date, and Mr. Clarkson remains in Washington with his coat off and his shirt sleeves rolled up. Go it, Clarkson! Out with the whole fifty-five thousand of them by January 1st." It adds with natural enthusiasm that civil service reform cannot command the support of a corporal's guard of republicans in New York. In Missouri, the chief party organ thinks Mr. Clarkson's labors, although laudable, yet rather deliberate in the direction of true reform, and is confident that "when the dog days are over and cool weather sets in Colonel Clarkson will greatly accelerate his speed." The leading party organ in the state asserts plainly "neither political party cares a continental about this humbug civil service reform." In New Hampshire the chief administration organ arraigning reform as "a stuffed and painted and unpopular humbug" and "a bald and sickety affair that bullies and wheedles good citizens" inexorably condemns it "to the scrap heap." In West Virginia a zealous organ believes devoutly that the spoils belong to the victor, and the editor having secured his part of the booty, announces that at the earliest practicable date every democratic appointee in the office entrusted to him, "from the humble and poorly paid applejack gaugers to the well paid storekeepers and clerks will be succeeded by Simon-pure all-wool-and-yard-wide republicans." In Pennsylvania an administration journal of importance declares that the people are tired of the hoax of reform and would gladly snow it under with their votes. In Ohio a similar representative administration organ warmly commends an officer who disregards the humbug. In Iowa the Washington correspondent of a journal of the same character says that no administration member of congress that he meets favors the law, and announces that "it will be repealed as it ought to be," while one of the chief journals in central New York holds, notwithstanding the express words of the platform, that the president is not bound to go beyond the law and enforce the spirit of reform. Another commending the refusal of the president to place the clerks of the census bureau under the rules of the civil service, declares its belief that the decision will be satisfactory to the party.

This is the tone of the larger part of the press of the administration party. No jeer is too contemptuous for reform, no epithet is too acrid. No platform of the opposition was ever denounced by party fury with greater scorn than that with which a representative body of the administration press now spurns its own. Naturally this uniformity of tone in the party journals throughout the union is echoed by party assemblies. The federation of republican clubs in the Third Maryland district, representing twenty-three associations, pledge themselves not to support for any office a candidate who honestly adheres to the national republican declaration upon reform. The central committee of the District of Columbia denounces "the cowardly, treacherous policy that to the defeated belong the spoils." The republican general committees in two New York counties denounce as un-American and unfair the civil service law which the republican platform pledges the party to extend; and state conventions of the administration party in three of the great states which it controls, Pennsylvania, Iowa and Ohio, which formerly loudly declared for reform, are this year silent. Three members of the cabinet decline to profess their adherence to the most emphatic declaration of the party platform, and one laughingly remarks that he does not think that he has appointed many democrats to office so far. Eminent senators and representatives of the party sneer with warmth at the concept of reform and dog the president for patronage. One representative announces that he will "test the sentiment of the house on the sham civil service law" alleging that "nine tenths of the members know that the law is a fraud and say so in private," and the energetic representative proposes "to strike them out and put them on record."

* * * * * * *

While this is the public sentiment of the party as revealed in all the ordinary methods, what is the executive action? Does that conform to the platform promise and the president's pledge? The knowledge of every citizen in his own community answers. The daily record of the newspapers for seven months answers. The general political proscription, the policy which President Harrison, when a senator, defined as "the frank and bold, if brutal, method of turning men and women out simply for political opinion;" the clean sweep which is proceeding in the postoffice, the alarm which pervades every branch of the service; the open, flagrant contempt for public opinion, for private information, and for the party promise, which was shown in the appointment of the late commissioner of pensions; the executive refusal to include the census service in the rules and the removal of public officers conspicuously fitted by character, ability and experience, who have absolutely and confessedly disregarded politics in their devotion to official duty and the public service, all these facts, and such as these, answer the question, how has the executive action conformed to the party promise and the president's pledge?

There are two signal illustrations of the manner in which those pledges have been kept. The fundamental principle of reform or of reasonable conduct of the public service requires the retention and reappointment of public officers in important places who are especially fitted for their posts by personal character, proved ability, by long service, and great experience, who are in no sense active politicians, and who are exclusively and most efficiently devoted to their official duties. When the administration came into power upon a platform of reform it found two such officers in the city of New York, the postmaster and the naval officer. Both of them had what is almost impossible under a spoils system, pride and enthusiasm in the public service in which both of them were knights without fear and without reproach. The administration could have given no such practical proof of its regard for reform as their retention in office. One of them, the postmaster, was summarily dismissed at the expiration of his term, nor can any reason connected with the public interest be assigned as the cause of his dismissal. The other, the naval officer, was displaced before the end of his term without a word, or sign of a reason alleged. The ablest and most serviceable of experienced public officers so [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the professions of the party [illegible] pledges of the president [illegible] dismissed. The president [illegible] the party had made the [illegible] which I have mentioned [illegible] of them was violated by the [illegible] It is not pretended that there was [illegible] reason for the executive [illegible] the desire to reward party [illegible] whether a sound reason [illegible] dent had publicly dismissed [illegible] motive for appointment [illegible] removal. The dismissal of the [illegible] naval officer was followed only until [illegible] partisans of the party which [illegible] claimed that the public service should [illegible] not be made party plunder [illegible] of a [illegible] distribution of the spoils. The result is that the two [illegible] of them by the [illegible] and most important of its kind in the country which were in themselves conclusive illustrations of the practical benefits of reform to the public welfare have been degraded again into prizes of partisan activity by the administration of a party which solicited support on the plea that reform of the civil service auspiciously begun under its auspices, should be further extended wherever it was applicable. The genius of Shakespeare, which embraces all experience and gives us words for every emergency, in the passionate scene between Hamlet and his mother, depicts him as accusing her of conduct which "calls virtue hypocrite" and makes her vows "as false as dicer's oaths."

* * * * * * *

The president has selected an admirable civil service commission. Every member of it is a sincere believer in the necessity and the practicability of reform and its vigilance and vigor are the best earnest of its effective service. He has refused also to extend the time appointed for including the railway mail service within the rules, and he has authorized the publication of the eligible lists. Besides these few executive acts the significance of which is destroyed by the general executive course, there is little that shows any effective party regard for the resounding promises of the platform. The few administration senators and representatives who have professed to favor reform and who lashed with stinging rhetoric the failures and inconsistencies of the late administration, now when their conviction and courage find a fitting opportunity, are passive and silent. They see the general violation of pledges by which the party pledged them. They see the principles which they declare ought to control the power of appointment and removal, openly disregarded. They see the abuses running riot, and apparently with their connivance, which they have themselves denounced. Yet instead of frankly refusing to do what they joined in declaring should not be done, instead of indignant protest in the name of their party and of honest politics which alarms those who make merchandise of the party faith and of the public service, they wail feebly that it is doubtful if the country really wants reform, that the pressure of trading politicians is very strong, and that there are many other important questions.

There is, indeed, a firm and strong protest in a portion of the party press against the abandonment of the platform. But these papers, like the leaders, do not condemn the constant contempt for reform shown by the administration. They commend the personal character of those who are appointed to office, without stating frankly that it is not the appointment but the removal which truly indicates the spirit and drift of the administration. They speak in no tone of challenge and command and conscious power to arrest the executive and the party chiefs of every degree in the reckless repudiation of good faith with the people. Unwilling to own that the platform promise and the executive pledge are of those professions,—

> Just palter with us in a double sense,
> That keep the [illegible] of promise to our ear
> And [illegible] it to our [illegible]

They serve only like stakes planted in a current to show the swiftness of the stream. One of them, only, so far as I know, and that a republican journal in Philadelphia with an independence worthy of an American newspaper, with whatever party in sympathy, says of the administration what must be accepted as a just verdict. "The administration, in almost every one of its acts since it was inaugurated on the 4th of March last, has [illegible] and flouted civil service reform and trampled under foot its own promises to respect it. It has turned it out of doors and barred the doors against it. That is the truth about the matter in brief, and the administration and its organs could do no better, wiser thing, than to frankly confess that having found civil service reform to interfere with its plans it whistled it down the wind as [illegible] as it would dismiss an objectionable tramp."

So say you, Mr. Foreman, so say we all, gentlemen of the jury. There was never a more comprehensive and significant declaration of reform made in a party platform than that under which the present administration came into power. But no party ever broke faith with itself and with the country more completely. It is not, however, a new situation. During the nine years of the existence of the league whatever may have been the profession, reform has not been the practice of either party. Nevertheless it has advanced steadily and surely in the face of party contempt and wrath and denunciation.

> "Yet, freedom! yet, thy banner torn, but flying, > Streams like a thunder storm, against the wind."

Last year I recounted in detail the actual achievements of reform in the laws and practice. They mark the rising tide of public sentiment. "With public sentiment," said Mr. Lincoln, "nothing can fail, without public sentiment nothing can succeed." The severe standards by which the executive conduct in regard to the civil service is tested by intelligent and independent citizens who believe that honesty is the best political policy, the impressive and startling contrast offered in the centennial year of the constitution between the tone and course of the first and later administrations, the deepening sense of shame that alone among the great powers of Christendom we degrade our own public service, all show unmistakably how profoundly the public conscience is stirred. The spectacle of the moment is a great object lesson. The argument for reform is steadily driven home by wanton party prostitution of the public service. Happily there is a conservative and patriotic public intelligence which is the sure and invincible bulwark of popular institutions, because it saves popular impulse from its own excesses. When that intelligence fails, the republic ends. But that it is not failing our recent history shows. It has already extorted from party a profession of reform. It will presently compel a policy of reform unless, as Goldwin Smith suggests, party can be maintained only by corruption and the bribery of place. But that is not yet the American faith. We do not believe that popular government is possible only when dishonest. But, on the contrary, although taught by recent and startling experience, that corruption is to-day the chief peril of the republic and believing that nothing more certainly stimulates it than the practice of converting the vast sum of the salaries of the civil service into a bribery fund at every national election, we have seen the awakening and the advance of the spirit of reform. As with all progress worth fighting for the contest is stubborn and resolute. Delays [illegible]

[illegible] fund to reward partisan service would be the best [illegible] check to the corruption which now threatens our political life? Thirteen years ago one of the most eminent of republican leaders said in the senate,—and if it was true then is it less true now?—"I have heard the taunt from friendliest lips that when the United States presented herself in the east to take part with the civilized world in generous competition in the arts of life, the only product of her institutions in which she surpassed all others beyond question was her corruption." When, three years hence, we welcome that world upon our shores to another competition of proficiency in those arts shall we be content with industrial superiority and material splendor? While our inventive genius, our daring enterprise, our swift civilization of a continent, may stir the wonder of the world, shall it not be our proudest boast that as the material miracle has been wrought under popular government our greatest achievement is the moral miracle of the constant purification of that government by the virtue and intelligence of the people?

Another Law Suit.

Another suit was begun against the city yesterday that may prove of considerable interest to a great many people. It is alleged that several plats of additions to the city in late years have not conformed to the law, and this suit is brought to establish the fact. The title of the complaint as filed in the district court is James C. Parrish, Delwyn Parrish, jr., and M. L. De Courcey vs. The City of Colorado Springs. The complaint is quite lengthy and recites the fact of the organization of the city in 1872, its subsequent reorganization under the general laws of the state in 1878, and of the filing of the plat of Parrish's addition to the city in 1874. That the streets and alleys were made to conform to the streets and alleys of the nearest portion of the city, etc. In June, 1887, a map and plat of Cahn's addition was submitted to the council, and at the meeting held September 5th, 1887, the council pretended and attempted to accept the plat as an addition to the city, etc. That in October, 1887, the plat of West Bluff addition to the city was offered and accepted. The complaint then recites that Cahn and West Bluff additions do not comply with the law as required in section 7 of chapter CIX of the general statutes of the general assembly, approved 1887, which requires that in accepting the addition the proposed streets and alleys therein must correspond as to course and angles with adjoining portions of said city and they do not show the topography of such territory as to bluffs, streams, ditches and ravines. It sets forth the damage to petitioners and other property holders in not having an outlet for their property to the west, and prays that a writ of certiorari be issued out of and under the seal of the court directing the city to bring into the court all records, papers, plats, maps, etc., relating to the acceptance of these additions, on the first day of the next term of court. That if they be found illegal and void that the same may be set aside. Judge Campbell issued the writ yesterday. Lunt, Armit & Phelps are the attorneys for De Courcey and the Parrishes.

The Next Dramatic Event.

Milton and Dollie Nobles, supported by a strong company, will be the attraction at the opera house next Monday evening. They will appear in their great play, "Love and Law." The St. Louis Republic, in speaking of Mr. Nobles, says: "In 'Love and Law' Mr. Nobles has established his claims to a place among the cleverest of our native dramatists. It is by far his best dramatic work, and one that will outlive his best previous efforts. The story is interesting and tersely told. The dialogues are very bright in the comedy scenes, and full of intensity and vigor in the more dramatic passages. The principal characters are clearly drawn and well defined, and the various climaxes well conceived and deftly executed. There is not, during the entire four acts, a minute that is dull or lacking in interest. Mr. Nobles is among our very best natural comedians and character actors, and he has never appeared to better advantage than as Felix O'Paff. It is a real pleasure to see an Irish gentleman on the stage. He is a type of dramatic character we have sadly missed since the final exit of dear, genial John Brougham."

Mr. James Duncan, jr., who has lately been a resident of Florissant, was mingling with old friends yesterday, the first time he has been out of the mountains for some time.

A special car, carrying a number of bankers passed through the city yesterday morning for Cascade. The members were recently at the bankers' convention in Kansas City and are now taking in the [illegible] of the Rocky Mountain region. They went to the summit of Pike's Peak yesterday returning to Manitou last night.

THE GAZETTE.

WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 2 1889

The new Presbyterian [illegible] church at Fort [illegible] was [illegible] by [illegible] on Sunday last.

The annual meeting of the [illegible] reading room library association occurs next Monday afternoon.

Mr. John Russell and family left for their new home in Washington territory yesterday afternoon.

A meeting of the C. B. Ferris Hose company will be held in the city hall to-night at 8 o'clock.

Messrs. Lowe, Westruff and [illegible] have returned from their hunting and fishing trip in Egeria park.

The ladies' guild of Grace church will meet at the residence of Mrs. Humphrey, 122 East Platte avenue, this afternoon at three o'clock.

Judge O. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] of Glens Falls, N. Y., who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. White, left for the east yesterday.

Mr. James H. Gardner returned from a trip to Salt Lake yesterday, where he went with his family some weeks ago. Mrs. Gardner remained in Salt Lake, the guest of friends.

Mrs. Brigham, wife of Judge Brigham, of the Massachusetts supreme court, Mrs. Thomas Brigham, of this city, and Mr. Al Brigham were passengers for Boston on last night's Rock Island train.

The Austin's Bluff company inserts a notice to contractors in another column, calling for bids for the building of a large reservoir in West Fountain creek. Bids are not to be opened until next Tuesday.

The members of Myrtle lodge, Knights of Pythias, have issued invitations for a social to be given in Castle hall this evening. No special programme has been prepared, but it is proposed to have a general good time.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to Sherman Hamilton and Miss Zoah M. Groves and to Patrick Cronin and Miss Melissa Groves, all of Manitou Park. Justice Corman performed the marriage ceremonies.

It is stated that the superintendent of the Colorado Springs and Manitou Street Car company is about to visit the east for the purpose of investigating the various systems of electric motors, with the ultimate intention of adopting the best one to the lines in this city. It is thought the pace at which Colorado Springs is booming along is getting a little too rapid for horse cars.

Deputy Sheriff Mills, of Falcon, came to town yesterday bringing Charles Jimmiey, the Italian who stabbed his cousin Emanuel, at Franceville. The justice at Falcon fined him $50 and costs and ten days in the county jail. The prisoner was quite badly hurt himself, having been stabbed by a man named Phillips, who escaped. The row was all occasioned over the celebrating of a birth in the Dago community. Charles went into a room where Emanuel was lying down and began hacking him with a knife. When asked if he meant to kill his cousin he said "Oh, no, just cut him a little."

Mr. Van Brunt, the architect of the new bank block, has arrived in the city and made an examination of the building. His opinion as to the cause of the crumbling of the columns is not made public. A gentleman interested in the building and who has watched its construction closely, stated yesterday his opinion that it was in the bedding for the foundation. He also thought that the stone in the columns would have to be replaced by harder stone. The red stone used was subjected to severe tests but it is not proving hard enough. A forty foot tower is to be built on the southeast corner which will add considerably to the weight. The bank block company started in to put up a building that would be a credit to the city, and it will not stop at cost to make it such.

Mr. Emory P. Moon furnishes the following record of the weather for the month of September, 1889, taken at Husted, Colo: Maximum temperature, 95° on the 3rd; minimum temperature, 27° on the 25th; mean temperature, 57.5°; maximum daily mean temperature, 72.5° on the 3rd, minimum daily mean temperature, 37 on the 24th; number clear days, (strictly), 6, and 1 cloudless but smokey; number fair days (light rain on some), 17, number foggy, cloudy or smoky days 5; number days on which rain fell, 8, total precipitation, 0.55 in; prevailing wind south 11 days and north 11 days. Thin ice formed on the 5th, but no frost until the morning of the 17th, on the 5th the temperature was the same, viz 32°, but there being no dew there was no frost. The 11th was cloudless but smoky.

BROOKVALE!

Brookvale is What and Where?

It is the new and attractive site platted into tracts of from one acre to four acres, located south and adjoining "West Colorado Springs," being only one block from the street car line and the main thoroughfare connecting Colorado Springs and Colorado City.

RESIDENCE. A number of these lots are so located as to invite those to purchase, who wish to secure for themselves beautiful sites for homes. They are slightly elevated, and present a most elegant view of "The Sister Cities" and the surrounding country. They are laid out on the liberal broad gauge plan, so that one may have ample room to make beautiful grounds.

WATER SUPPLY.—Without water the most fertile soil is worthless. Brookvale is well supplied with water, having the first ditch right on the Fountain Creek.

GARDEN TRACTS—While some of these lots are especially desirable as Residence sites, others are certainly calculated for Gardens. They are level as a floor, with a soil of the richest quality, and have an abundant water supply, and then when we take into consideration their nearness to market, we must come to the conclusion, that for gardeners they can not be surpassed.

Do You Wish to Purchase One of These Garden Tracts Cheap?

If so come now and we will make you a present of one of those choice building sites in addition.

For Further Particulars Call on or Address.

THE NORTH END ADDITION!

CENTRAL OFFICE: 106 PIKE'S PEAK AVE.

This city is going NORTHWARD. Careful investors see this and are buying in the NORTH END ADDITION. Lots on Cascade Avenue, Tejon Street and Nevada Avenue, at present prices, are sure to make money. Costly buildings already erecting show the character of the addition as a site for homes. Prices on Cascade Avenue have already been advanced, though the addition has been on the market but a short time. The Street Railway extends through the addition and every lot has City Water. Those who wish safe investments, or homes in the best section, should secure lots NOW before prices are further advanced.

I have also a list of miscellaneous properties comprising the best offered for sale in the city and its environs.
